

Veterans Administration Medical Center

Wilkes Barre, Pennsylvania

Bell was responsible for the general construction of a new ambulatory care addition, as well as renovations to this major medical center.

The project, which required the excavation of fourteen feet of rock immediately adjacent to the existing hospital structure, involved the erection of two eleven-story towers tying into the existing facility. Operating rooms, laboratories and patient care areas were constructed in both the new and renovated areas.

Bell also upgraded the existing mechanical and electrical systems serving the complex.
